

LWL Tips For The First Time Trailer Buyer.

1. Sandblasted, Primed and Painted Frame.

Sandblasting thoroughly cleans the frame to remove any oil and debris. It is the only way to remove the mill scale from the steel. Priming and painting ensures extra protection against the elements and provides a nice finish to your trailer. All of LWL brand trailers are sandblasted and finished, giving you years of protection from the elements.

2. Protected Lighting.

Lights are part of the safety system on all trailers and with any safety system you want reliability. All of the LWL brand trailers have their tail lights (sealed beam or LED) enclosed in a steel tube to prevent the damage caused by the road debris thrown up by the tires. This extra level of protection ensures peace of mind on that long trip after dark.

3. Welded Frame versus Bolted Construction.

Some of the smaller utility trailers on the market that are offered in the “big box” store environment need assembly, requiring the trailer to be bolted together. The LWL brand of trailers comes standard with a welded together frame. They are assembled by professionals to provide a stronger structure that easily outlasts the bolt together trailers.

4. Sealed Wiring Harness.

Lights are the first thing that fails on a trailer and are the most frustrating thing to fix. LWL has taken extra steps to prevent this from happening. Wiring harnesses generally fail at the connections first. LWL understands this and offers the best mounted, best sealed, and most trouble free harness on the market today. LWL wiring harnesses are fastened to the frame through washers which are welded onto the frame. This is a much more secure mounting method than staples in our Canadian environment. The actual wires are enclosed in a sealed rubber case. What really separates LWL from the competition, is our connectors. The connector that joins the wires together does two things. First it makes the connection securely and safely. Secondly and more importantly is removes all of the air and buries the connection in silicone inside the plastic case thus providing 100% protection from all nature can throw at it. This connection system beats black tape and heat shrink tubing every time.

5. What Is The Warranty Coverage and Where Do I Get Service?

LWL offers the longest warranty coverage of any trailer manufacturer. A full 5 year structural warranty comes standard on our premium line. 10 year warranty is standard on the LED lights and Dexter provides a 5 year suspension warranty on their Torflex axles. This coverage is second to none and LWL provides service at all of their dealers giving you peace of mind on your new trailer for years to come.
